Professor Sonny Nwankwo

PhD FCIM FRSA FHEA Chartered Marketer
Director - Noon Centre for Equality & Diversity in Business
University of East London, United Kingdom

Sonny Nwankwo is Professor of Marketing and Director of the Noon Centre for Equality & Diversity in Business at the University of East London, UK. He was the founding Director of the Petchey Centre of Entrepreneurship at the University of East London, previously the Director of Research and Enterprise within East London Business School and the inaugural President of the International Academy of African Business and Development. He is widely published and a recipient of the ANBAR Citation of Excellence for Highest Quality Rating. Professor Nwankwo is on the Editorial Advisory/Review Board of several academic journals. He is External Assessor and Visiting Professor at universities in the United Kingdom, Australia, Thailand and across Africa. Prior to entering academia, he was a manager in the telecommunications industry. Prof Nwankwo developed his research in Marketing, with specialism in consumerism under conditions of market failure. Through his current research, he seeks to extend the normative boundaries of marketing by focusing diverse and often culture-specific challenges of economic behaviour, and the power of individuals to create value and make choices in the marketplace both as consumers and entrepreneurs. Thus, from the broader field of consumer behaviour and its role in shaping identities and interactions, he extends his attention to the dynamics of entrepreneurship among the British ethnic minority population, particularly the entrepreneurial processes of Africans in the UK. His research in this area examines the relations between entrepreneurial identity and individual life histories in the context of everyday interactions.
